FCA and Chrysler Brand Expand Partnership With No Kid Hungry to Feed Children Impacted by Coronavirus School Closures

- Fiat Chrysler Automobiles (FCA) is partnering with No Kid Hungry to support its grantees - schools, food banks and community groups across the country - in serving 640,000 meals during the crisis-related school closures as part of the automaker's broader 1 million meals commitment
- No Kid Hungry is providing emergency grants to schools, food banks and community groups all across the country, and diverting staff and resources to the hardest hit communities
- FCA's partnership with No Kid Hungry expands on the partnership Chrysler brand announced mid-March to provide meals to kids in need with the sale of each Chrysler Pacifica
- FCA has partnered with more than 40 local nonprofits to feed school children in its plant communities in Illinois, Indiana, Michigan, Ohio, as well as Canada and Mexico

May 7, 2020, Auburn Hills, Mich. - In response to the coronavirus crisis, Fiat Chrysler Automobiles (FCA) announced a commitment to provide more than 1 million meals to ensure children who depend on school meals continue to have access to nutritious food. FCA is moving closer to achieving this goal, partnering with No Kid Hungry to support its grantees - schools, food banks and community groups across the country - in serving 640,000 meals during school closures due to the pandemic. FCA's corporate partnership is incremental to the expanded partnership with No Kid Hungry that the Chrysler brand announced in mid-March.

"There has never been a more important moment to help children and their families," said Mark Stewart, Chief Operating Officer of FCA - North America. "FCA and the Chrysler brand are pleased to support No Kid Hungry in its mission to end childhood hunger."

Millions of vulnerable children are losing the healthy meals they depend on as the coronavirus has closed schools nationwide. No Kid Hungry has a plan to help feed them. As part of its coronavirus relief and recovery efforts, No Kid Hungry is providing emergency grants to schools, food banks and community groups all across the country, and diverting staff and resources to the hardest hit communities.

"We are incredibly grateful to FCA and to the Chrysler brand for stepping up even more so for America's kids," said Tom Nelson, President and CEO at Share Our Strength, the organization behind the No Kid Hungry campaign. "This incremental support will help us feed more vulnerable kids who are currently missing the school meals they rely on."

In addition to its national partnership with No Kid Hungry, FCA is working with more than 40 local nonprofit organizations (Table 1) that are providing meals to children in the communities around its principal manufacturing plants in Illinois, Indiana, Michigan and Ohio. Similar programs are underway in Canada and Mexico.

Chrysler Brand Expands Partnership with No Kid Hungry

The Chrysler brand first partnered with No Kid Hungry in 2018 to help end childhood hunger in America. This March, the Chrysler brand announced it was expanding that partnership. With the sale of every Chrysler Pacifica from March 18 through the end of June, Chrysler is making a contribution that will help No Kid Hungry provide meals to kids in need across the country.
