FCA 'Women of Color' Earn Recognition at Annual STEM Event

- Women of Color in Science, Technology, Engineering and Math (STEM) Conference honors the significant achievements of women in STEM professions
- FCA employees consistently have earned important technical professional recognition from various diversity organizations over the years

October 9, 2020, Auburn Hills, Mich. - FCA technical business leaders received honors for their career achievements at the annual Women of Color in Science, Technology, Engineering, and Math (STEM) Conference held virtually, October 8-10.

The Women of Color STEM Conference honors the significant achievements of women in STEM professions. The conference ensures that the accomplishments of outstanding women in technical fields are highly visible to industry professionals, government officials and students.

FCA employees consistently have earned important technical professional recognition from various diversity organizations over the years, such as BEYA and others, reflecting the company's strong commitment to developing its diverse workforce.

"The 2020 Women of Color STEM Awards celebrate many of the country's most promising and influential female technical business leaders," said Lottie Holland, Director, Diversity, Inclusion, Engagement & Talent Acquisition, FCA – North America. "FCA is proud that our women technical leaders are regarded consistently among such accomplished professionals."
